

ATALIAN acquires the CADIOU Group to strengthen its presence in Western France

The French Group ATALIAN, a major service provider, has just acquired CADIOU; a family-run group specialized in engineering services and electrical maintenance.

Created in 1947 and established in Brittany, the CADIOU Group is specialized in electrical engineering, installation, maintenance, and compliance and troubleshooting. It works with a diversified clientele composed of public markets (e.g. marine), local authorities, small and medium companies, large groups operating in the industrial sectors (agribusiness, quarries, manufacturers) and corporate sectors (construction).

Thanks to its 156 employees, CADIOU Group generates an annual turnover of 18 M€ and offers a complete range of services, such as:

- High and low voltage, HVAC, Mechanics
- Automation and industrial computing

For Bruno Gstach, the Director of ATALIAN's technical services division: "This operation allows us to strengthen our presence in Western France and to incorporate a company, skilled in the maintenance of high and low voltage. Not only is ATALIAN's technical maintenance division capable of intervening across the entire country, the division is part of a more global approach to the development of ATALIAN's FM offering in France".

For Sébastien Lastapis, President of ATALIAN France: « This operation is part of the Group's business development strategy. In the next two years, we want our external growth efforts to focus on technical maintenance, security and landscaping service lines, in order to develop our FM offering. »

For this operation, ATALIAN was advised by Gilles Chabot, an Associate from Wagram.
